THOUSANDS TO JOIN IN LUTHER JUBILEE TO BE HELD SUNDAY

Congregations of Many Southern Wisconsin Towns Will Attend Celebration at Fair Grounds.

Final preparations for the joint Lutheran celebration of the 40th anniversary of the Reformation to be held tomorrow, September 9th, at the Janesville fair grounds, have been made today, and the occasion will mark a memorable event in the history of the Lutheran church of Rock county. Not only will local Lutherans attend the jubilee, but congregations at Clinton, Sharon, Delevan, Durand, Hanover, Center, Edgerton, Milton, Watertown and Fort Atkinson have promised sizable delegations if the weather permits. Even in case of unfavorable weather a large number of the Lutheran churches of the county will be afforded ample protection against wind and rain by the grand stand and other buildings.

At 9:30 a. m. an auto parade headed by a brass band of Watertown and the school children of St. Paul's Lutheran church will start from the latter place and proceed to the fair grounds. The morning service commences at 10:30, and the Rev. P. H. Eggers, vice-president of the Wisconsin district, will deliver the address at the Reformation jubilee. He will show that Luther's work for the church was a work of reformation and of liberation.

The afternoon service will be in English, commencing at two o'clock. The speaker, Rev. W. Albrecht, will have for his subject: "Luther the Liberator." He will depict Luther as the prophet of spiritual liberty and the harbinger of American liberty. Both addresses promise to be very interesting and instructive, since the speakers are very capable men. The Rev. Albrecht spent part of his boyhood days in Janesville, when his father, Prof. M. J. F. Albrecht, president of Concordia college at Milwaukee, was pastor of St. Paul's church in 1890.

Following is the program for the English service: The choir will sing "Prelude—St. John's band. Hymn: 'A Mighty Fortress is our God,' congregation. The choir will sing 'The Creed.' (Spoken by the entire assembly.) St. Paul's children's chorus. Address: 'Luther the Liberator.' Pastor W. Albrecht. St. Paul's male chorus. Offertory: Collection for Jubilee fund. The Lord's prayer and benediction. Doxology. Congregation. Postlude: Band.

COMPANY M GIVES EXHIBITION DRIVE

Camp Douglas, Sept. 8.—We gave an exhibition drill for the benefit of the rest of the regiment this afternoon. The drill was on the order of the new methods of warfare and was certainly enjoyed by all. The boys who took part in the first drill of the kind ever held in the state of Wisconsin. Lines of whitewash were drawn to represent trenches and we were to have a time, just like in the olden days when we used to play war for fun and excitement. It is no longer a play but good hard work.

Company "M" is in line for another vaccination tomorrow and we are expected to spend another day of rest if we do not get sick from the effects of the vaccination.

The menu for today was as follows: Breakfast—Roast beef, gravy, scalloped corn, bread, syrup and coffee. Dinner—Beef stew, bread, coffee and jam.

Supper—Hamburger, boiled onions, bread, syrup, potatoes and coffee. The detail for today was as follows: In charge of quarters—Sergeant Flanery.

Fatigue—Corporal Gums, Privates N. Horn, Vogel, Hilton, Hill, R. Ellis, Holden, Jacobsen, E. Johnson, Kizer, Knapp, Lee, Marshall, Masch, Burhaus, Galuska, Milbrandt.

Kitchen—Privates Berkatew, Truchter and Bickie.

We experienced one of the worst storms of the season Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. The wind blew, the thunder rolled and we thought sure we were going to be washed away.

When we got up in the morning the company street was a regular river. The men in the last tent were just about drowned, the water flowing directly under their tents. Today the last tent was moved up on the side of a small hill where the water will not get such a sweep next time it rains. The same thing happened to nearly every last tent of the company in the regiment. Shoes, boxes, papers in the regiment, came floating down the stream and finally lodged over in the cavalry grounds where they were picked up by their owners. Many a man lost a pair of shoes or some other article of wearing apparel.

Corporal Craig was seen lying on his cot with a long pole fishing out all articles within his reach. The corporal has a regular collection of articles for sale and is waiting for their owners to claim the articles.

This morning instead of our regular drill we marched over to the hospital and received another inoculation. We loaded around camp this afternoon, many of us with sore arms.

SHORTAGE OF COAL IN MANUFACTURING PLANTS OF COUNTY

Survey by Defense Council, Shows That Supply on Hand Will Last a Little Over a Month.

Manufacturing concerns of Rock county are up against a shortage of coal according to a survey of the situation conducted by the defense council, secretary of the county defense council, Mr. Starr's report, which will be forwarded to the state defense board for information and reference, shows that there is little more than enough coal in the bins of manufacturing plants to turn them for one month.

Some plants had coal to last six or eight months while others were supplied with enough to run them for three weeks. The general average indicated that the total amount of coal accounted for 13,375 tons, will run the fifty-five factories from which statistics were secured, for 1.08 months, a general average of the amount required for each plant being secured along with the other data.

Whatever steps are taken to insure the manufacturing plants of the county with an adequate supply of coal, will be left to the state council of defense which has considered the matter of the entire state on the matter of fuel. It is probable that drastic steps will be necessary in order to keep the factories of Wisconsin running at full capacity.

The state council urges every possible economy in the use of coal and the burning of cheaper grades of such grades as are more readily available.

Mr. Starr has been working for several weeks gathering the statistics on the local coal situation and has continued his survey carefully to companies, condensers and large users of coal. Coal dealers were not included and their supply on hand is not taken into consideration. The statistics were secured by personal solicitation and letters. Mr. Starr prolonged his term of service with the county defense council in order to complete this work on other matters which he had under consideration. He will complete his term of service with the local council within a few days.

FOURTH HOLDS FIRST REGIMENTAL PARADE

Company K, 4th Wis. Infantry, Camp Douglas, Sept. 8.—One of the heaviest rainfalls of the season fell here Monday morning. The boys had never witnessed so much water flowing in their street. Some of the boys were set out of bed to find new quarters to sleep in, as the water was standing about a foot deep in their tents.

The fourth regiment was on their first regimental parade Thursday afternoon. This being their first parade much could not be expected of them, but the company went through the drill in a respectable manner, which is a great credit to our company and regiment.

Company K will go on their first guard mount on Friday. This will be a new thing for our boys, but if they go through this as they do their drill it will be as good a guard as can be expected for the first time. The boys have the spirit of an soldier as they are all willing to do their bit.

Adolph Jensen of Edgerton was a camp visitor Monday.

Misses Vingom, Hagen and Stensland visited camp the fore part of the week.

FRIDAY'S MARKETS. Chicago, Sept. 8.—Better grades of hogs advanced 10@15c yesterday, while common packers showed little change. Best offerings sold at $18.75 and Armour's mixed drove sold at $16.75. Price range widening, with today's prices higher.

Notwithstanding the fact that this week's receipts of sheep are largest of the year, prices are advancing largely owing to the wonderfully good demand from country feeders, who have taken more than a third of the week's receipts.

Two loads of 1,447-lb. distillery fed steers sold to Armour & Co. yesterday at $17.15, equaling the record price made earlier in the week for best corn fed steers. Tendency of prices for choice cattle is higher.

E. S. Swift and Edward Morris marked 22,600 for next Monday's probable hog run. F. W. Waddell and Alden Swift guessed 25,000; E. R. Gensert, 23,000; J. O. Hoot and W. H. Miller, 20,000; B. Brittain, 18,000; W. H. Overman, 15,000, and G. M. Nicoll, 14,000.

Receipts for today are estimated at 1,500 cattle, 4,000 hogs and 2,500 sheep, against 751 cattle, 7,821 hogs and 461 sheep corresponding Saturday a year ago.

Average price of hogs at Chicago was $17.50 against $17.35 Thursday. The week ago, $10.64 a year ago and 7.24 two years ago.

Few Cattle on Sale. Buyers found few cattle on sale yesterday and their orders were limited so that sellers found an indifferent outlet for everything at steady rates. Calves were fairly active with best at $10.00. Although many cattle were at $10.00 or lower a week ago, the good to prime corn-fed steers are strong to 50c higher. Poor quality animals have weakened off, and this made quotations:

Choice to fancy steers... $15.75@17.00. Poor to good steers... 7.00@15.55. Yearlings, fair to fancy... 7.00@17.00. Fat calves and heifers... 6.00@12.75. Culling cows and cutters... 4.50@6.35. Native bulls and stags... 5.90@10.00. Feeding cattle, 600@1,100 lbs... 6.50@9.60. Poor to fancy veal calves... 10.50@16.00.

Hogs Average Higher. Hogs sold mainly 10@15c higher yesterday, but common pack grades were draggy throughout the session and closed weak. Pigs were scarce and in good demand, at higher rates, some shippers being unable to fill all of their orders. Geneva sold at $12 and price range a little wider because of the comparatively urgent call for best offerings, top for the day being $18.35. Quotations: Bulk of sales... $16.80@18.10. Heavy butchers, ship... 18.10@18.35. Light butchers, 190 to 230 lbs... 17.85@18.35. Light bacon, 145 to 190 lbs... 18.90@18.25. Heavy packing, 200 to 250 lbs... 16.65@17.30. Rough, heavy packing... 16.35@16.65. Poor to best pigs, 60 to 125 lbs... 12.25@16.25. Stags, 80 lbs, dockage per head... 17.00@18.00.

Sheep and Lambs Firm. Sheep and yearlings sold on a strong basis yesterday, and lambs ruled strong to 25c higher, but native offerings finished weak. Trade was active until late in the day, but pens were full and prices up to $17.40 for ewes and killers. A few native ewes made $10.75 and westerns sold up to $11.25. Wethers topped at $12.50 and odd yearlings reached

WILL GIVE COURSE IN RETAIL SELLING

George P. Irwin of University Extension Department Plans to Give Lectures in Janesville.

Principal C. F. Hill of the Janesville continuation and evening school has arranged with the extension division of the university of Wisconsin to secure the services of George P. Irwin, a practical business man who has had years of experience in department store work, to give a series of six lectures on retail selling, as one of the features of the evening school.

A preliminary meeting will be held on next Wednesday evening, Sept. 12, at the high school building, at which Mr. Irwin will outline the nature of the course, and it will be decided definitely when it shall begin. An opportunity will be given to ask questions and to learn fully the ground which Mr. Irwin proposes to cover. All retailers, their employees and persons interested in retail selling are invited to attend the meeting next Wednesday. It will not in any way obligate a person to take the course but it will be a preliminary lecture of value to those who contemplate following the course through. Since the course is given under the auspices of the continuation school there will be no charge for it, except the incidental expenses of text-books and supplies.

Mr. Irwin proposes to give one lecture a week. On the day of the lecture he will be in Janesville for the purpose of giving his services to any retailer store to assist in demonstrating his teachings in salesmanship, advertising or any other problem of selling which may come up. Members of his classes will have the opportunity of conferring with him and will be urged to bring individual cases or problems to him for consideration and solution.

J. M. Connors, chairman of the retailers' division of the commercial club is interested in securing a large enrollment in the course, not only of the retailers themselves, but of the general public. The opportunity is exceptional in that Mr. Irwin is a practical man and illustrates the points made in store management, as he devotes his time during the summer to a department store which he owns in the east. Mr. Irwin has lectured on this course three years for the university extension bureau and has received the high endorsement of leading retailers in many Wisconsin cities. Before coming to Janesville, he gave the course in eastern cities and received the commendation of such journals as the Dry Goods Economist, a leading periodical of the dry goods trade.

There were over 2,000 persons enrolled in the course last year in Wisconsin. It is probable that more than one hundred will be secured to take up the work in Janesville.

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

Hardly a day has passed since the Barnum show exhibited here (two weeks ago) that I was not asked what the expense of running a show like that would be. There never was a time when that question was as hard to answer as it is today. Not only for the reason of the "high cost" of everything, but the extra help which they have to hire in every town, and I find that the larger shows have much the same trouble. It seems to me that the difference how much they pay the average working man in many of the towns where they exhibit, for there is always someone ready to pay them more.

Many of the people who work with the circus are of the floating population, who would just as lief live in any part of the country, and are ready to drop off if the pay is several times that of the average working man. Many of the larger shows have been unable to put up the tops of the big tents, especially the menagerie, and the best they can do is to park the cages, and put up the side walls and canvas, and then they can. Several times during the summer the entire circus had to be given without a top. This makes it very hard to give the high performance, especially that of the high aerial acts, where they are turning double somersaults in the burning sun.

If there is any one business in the world which is the average working man is to say, it is with the circus under all conditions. There is not a show on the road today, if it comes to a show-down, that the performers, men and women, will not carry the plank, if necessary, in order to get the show out.

Gottman and Patterson were showing in Beloit on Saturday, and it was four o'clock in the afternoon before they could get the show up, and it is fair to say, that more than three-fourths of the people left for home, which made the afternoon show a big loss.

Mr. Patterson is acting manager of the show, and wherever it was possible they hired all the men they could get in the town, and paid them as much as $2 and a ticket for the show, for two or three hours of work. While all the larger shows are having a big season, it is a question of how much money they will have in the bank, on account of the extra expense.

A few days ago I had a letter from the "Big Ranch" (The West Show, which is owned and managed by Jess Willard, the heavyweight champion of the world).

The "Big Ranch" showed in Detroit Michigan on August 21st, the same week that the Barnum and Bailey show was at Janesville. They were crowded to the ring bank in the afternoon, and at night they turned out the more than 10,000 people, closing the ticket when it was twenty minutes past seven. This is undoubtedly due to the drawing power of Jess Willard.

News Notes from Movieland

Robert Leonard, comes word from the far west, is another photo player who has felt the chill of the draft. Leonard was among the fatal number in his district, and must come to for examination in a brief time. He will ask exemption. Robert Kane, of the Paradia Circus, who was drafted and passed his physical examination, is attempting to enlist in the second rifle corps at the Presidio, Los Angeles. Guy Price, dramatic critic of the Los Angeles Herald, has been drafted and accepted, but probably will secure exemption because of dependents.

BRONCHO RIDERS IN DOUG'S NEXT

When Douglas Fairbanks attended the frontier celebration at "Hoyden's" which took place in his next picture, "Fanny Hill Snowwood," the film is now being photographed on one of the big Wyoming ranches, and among those who were with him, the camera's range are Sam Brownell, champion bucking broncho rider of the world, Tommy Gaines, famous as a steer roping cowboy, Jack Miller, Tom Yarberry, Bill Baker, Charley Scott, Bill Brown, H. A. Strickland, champion horseback bucking broncho rider, and some others whose names are revered in the sage-brush country. Frank Campan, interpreter of western roles, is one of the principal players in Mr. Fairbanks' following film. For the picture following this one Mr. Fairbanks will make a flying trip to New York via New Orleans. The story opens in the east, then takes the hero to Italy, and ends in New York harbor. Aphony studio pitch average would be ridiculous, of course, so the comedians intend coming to the real one.

Walt Whitman, veteran character actor, will soon make his appearance as a southern planter, wearing long coat, breeches, trousers, and white breeches, in the picture "The War of the Roses," which is being made by the Fox company of color players. It has been expected for the season showing the plantation of antebellum days.

Max Murray is to be introduced in a new picture, "The Girl Who Knew," which is a dance before the picture is released. Each dance, it is said,

Resume of Moving Picture Programs Of The Week

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.) A special effort was made by the managers of the several theaters to secure specially good programs for Labor Day. The double bill of the Marjorie and the Duke, and the Marjorie and the Duke, being at her best in "Her Husband," and William Barnum giving a splendid characterization in "The End of the Trail." Beautiful scenes of the frozen north were shown. On Tuesday, E. H. Sothern was seen in "A Man of Mystery," which is a story of Italy. The man, who was united by his wife, was nearly overwhelmed by an eruption of Vesuvius, was found nearly dead and taken to a hospital. The intense heat had cured his rheumatism, and so he recovered his appearance, and so he won the love of his wife, under this changed condition and under a different name. The garden scenes and those of the eruption were especially good. The story of the week, was a sad and sad story of a young girl's sacrifice for her loved ones. Her story was told in a most beautiful and beautiful way, which somewhat relieved its unwholesome tone. A very good program was shown at the children on Saturday. At the Apollo on Labor Day was a double bill of "The Queen Mary," which began with castle scenes of English life and end-the champion, for if there is any one thing the average American citizen worships, it is a champion. I think today that Jess Willard is the greatest drawing card that any show has had since the days of Jumbo with the Barnum and Bailey show, and that of Louise Montague, the $10,000 beauty.

If you can get a real drawing card with the circus, that will fill the canvas afternoon and evening, it makes but little difference what the price is, if you can afford to pay it.

It has only been a few years since Jess Willard worked on a farm in Kansas, and little did he dream at that time, that in a few years he would have a big show of his own, and that thousands of people would come only to get a glimpse of the champion, it is safe to say, that he will hold it for many years, as he takes the best of care of himself. He neither drinks nor smokes, and is always attending to business.

The following letter will give you an idea of the many hardships that the big shows must encounter this season.

Business with the Tragenbeck-Wallace Circus still continues big, and at the present clip, the season of 1917 promises to be the biggest in the history of the show. The show is being moved this year in three or four sections, and the fact that only this year three parades have been lost, speaks for itself.

Although the show made its first trip through the West and Northwest in eight years yet, with two exceptions, capacity business filled the sections, and in every stand. On account of the mid-week jump between Billings, Montana, and Lewiston, (177 miles), the performances were held without the big top, only the side walls being raised. The parade was given at 2 p. m., and the doors to the afternoon show opened at 3:15 p. m.

Edward Billard, owner of the show, was away several days, arranging for a new track to be installed at the winter quarters in West Baden. In the past, the cars were kept in LaFayette, Indiana, during the winter months.

The government draft caught several employees in its net. Among them being George Pope of West Baden, Indiana, who has charge of the front door.

Mr. Wirth, and the Wirth family, will not play a winter engagement in Cuba, with the Santos & Artigas Circus, as announced a few weeks ago, but a hitch in the matter of stock came up at the last minute, and very reluctantly, the Wirths were compelled to decline the engagement.

The booking with the Santos & Artigas Circus was practically closed, but a hitch in the matter of stock came up at the last minute, and very reluctantly, the Wirths were compelled to decline the engagement.

Salads are made out of old whisk brooms, old gingham aprons, old chopped-up overshoes, old pineapple husks, peanut shells, banana peels, old newspapers, shavings, old chrysanthemums, or anything.

Just so there is a layer of lettuce on the bottom and some salad dressing on top.

That brings us to salad dressings, which we will now discuss.

Salad dressings are made out of sewing-machine oil, automobile transmission grease, melted candles, carbolic acid, whites of eggs, furniture polish, quinine, or anything.

Salads are easy to make. The materials may be bought cheaply of any florist, or the housewife may compound a salad without going outside the house if she wishes.

She may grab something out of the bureau drawer, something out of the medicine chest, something out of the sink strainer, and something out of the refrigerator, and chop them all into fine bits and spread them on top of a leaf of lettuce and hide them under some yellow salad dressing, and put a cherry on top and enter the dining-room in a burst of vegetable glory.

The highest compliment you can pay a hostess is to say, "What a beautiful salad! I'm sure you won't care if I put it in my buttonhole!" In that way you accomplish a double end: you gladden a human heart and escape a salad.

ed in the wild, mountainous regions of the west, Wallace Reid made a splendid character of the son, who loved the outdoor Indian girl. Beautiful Hawaiian scenes were brought to the screen in the "Imp of the Bath," where Sessue Hayakawa personated a native fisher lad. He was persuaded to buy a magic bottle of which he could give all kinds of wealth. But he found the incubus very hard to get rid of and suffered extremely in its possession. A large program was given on Monday as a benefit for the O. F. for the benefit of the war news letter there was a Fox comedy and "The Crystal Gazer." The latter was the story of two sisters left orphans while young. One was adopted by wealthy people and the other had fallen into the hands of a fake medium. Both fell in love with the same man and complications ensued. Until the tragic death of the poor girl left the way clear. Fanny Ward took the part of both sisters very creditably.

The Labor Day offering at the Beverly was W. S. Hart in "The Patriot." In this Hart is supposed to have been a soldier of the Spanish-American war and to have been cheated out of some mining claims in the west. He goes to Washington, quite sure that the wrong will be set right. But embittered by defeat in his plan, he decides to give help to Mexico, only to find that he cannot turn traitor to his country.

Melroy Anderson gave sweet, pathetic scenes of the devoted wife in "The Wife on Trial." In the story she agreed to take care of a young man, paralyzed by an accident, in return for a home and a rose garden.

George Mack and Theodora Warfield singing "Babes in the Woods," in the famous musical comedy hit, "VERY GOOD, EDDIE," to be seen soon at Myers Theatre. Inserts are Denman Maley and Florence Earle, principals in the cast.

The man recovers his health, and happiness for all parties ensues. A quaint, pretty little character was created by Madge Evans in "The Duchess." She was at first a child of the tenements, and then found to be heiress to a baronial castle in England. Her adventures with the old duke and the grandsons of the castle were very funny and interesting. Jack Gardner, as an officer of the mounted police of Canada, in "Open Places" gave a good rendition of the part. His task was to arrest an outlaw, who proved to be the divorced husband of his sweetheart.

PLANS RELIEF FOR CAPTURED AMERICANS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, Sept. 8.—Americans captured and held in German prison camps are to be looked after by the American Red Cross. Already a prisoners' relief committee has been organized, under supervision of Ellis L. Dresel of the American legation at Berne, Switzerland.

The German policy of giving prisoners poor and scanty rations is to be counteracted by shipping food parcels to American prisoners. Each will contain a post card, to be signed as a receipt and returned, as a means of making sure the Americans get the aid intended for them.

These packages will contain ten pounds of meat, a quantity of butter, jam, coffee or tea, salt, rice and dried food. The parcels will be sent three times in a fortnight.

Arrangements also have been made permitting sending clothing, money and letters from the families in this country of men taken prisoners.

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

She thrust away from him. She was oppressed with a sense almost of fear, a feeling that he was able to read the very thoughts forming in her brain; to understand, as no one else in the world could understand, the things that lived in her heart.

"I must not keep you," he remarked, glancing at the clock. "It was very late for me to call, and you will be wanting to join your friends."

"They are coming here for me," she explained. "There is really no hurry at all. We are not changing anything. It is to be quite a simple evening. Sometimes I wish that you cared about things of that sort, Eugene."

He blew through his lips a little cloud of smoke from the cigarette which he had just lit.

"I am not of the people," he said, "and I have no sympathy with them. I detest the bourgeoisie of every country in the world—my own more particularly."

"If you only knew how strange that sounds!" she murmured.

"Does it?" he answered. "You should read my family history, read of the men and women of my race who were butchered at the hands of that drunken, lustful mob whom lying historians have glorified. I am one of those who do not forget injuries. My estates are administered more severely than any others in France. No penny of my money has ever been spent in charity. I neither forget nor forgive."

She laughed a little nervously.

"What an unsympathetic person you can be, Eugene."

"And for that very reason," he replied. "I can be sympathetic. Because I hate some people, I have the power of loving others. Because it pleases me to deal severely with my enemies, it gives me joy to deal generously with my friends. That is my conception of life. May I wish you a pleasant evening?"

"You are going now?" she asked, a little surprised. "When shall I see you again?"

A telephone message from your maid, a line written with your own fingers," he said, "will bring me to you within a few minutes. If I hear nothing, I may come uninvited, but it will be when the fancy takes me. Once more, Louise, a pleasant evening!"

He passed out of the door, which the parlour maid was holding open for him, crossing to the window. Louise watched him leave the house and enter his waiting automobile. He gave no sign of haste or disappointment. He lit another cigarette deliberately upon the pavement and gave his orders to the chauffeur with some care.

As the car drove off without his having once glanced up at the window, she sighed a little. There was a silence which, it seemed to her, could be more inhibitory even than accusation.

CHAPTER VIII.

The little room was quaintly decorated and redolent with the lingering odors of many dinners. Yet Louise, who had dined on the preceding evening at the Ritz and been bored, whose taste in food and environment was at least hypercritical, was perfectly happy. She found the cuisine and the Châliani excellent.

"We are outstaying everyone else," she declared, "and I don't even mind their awful leechy of tobacco smoke. Do you see that the waiter has brought you the bill, Mr. Strangewey? Prepare for a shock. It is fortunate that you are a millionaire!"

John laughed as he paid the bill and ludicrously overpaid the waiter.

"You are so convincing," Sophie murmured. "But remember that your future entertainment is in the hands of two women, one of whom is a deserving but struggling young artist without the means of gratifying her expensive tastes."

"My children," said Louise, rising, "we must remember that we are going to the Palace. It is quite time we started."

They made their way down two flights of narrow stairs into the street. The concubinaire raised his whistle to his lips, but Louise stopped him. "We will walk," she suggested. "This way, Mr. Strangewey!"

They passed down the long, narrow street, with its dingy foreign cafes and shops, scarcely one of which seemed to be English. The people who thronged the pavement wore of a new race to John, swarthy, a little furtive, a class of foreigner seldom seen except in alien lands. Men and women in all stages of dishabille were leaning out of the windows or standing on the door steps. The girls whom they met occasionally—young women of all ages, walking arm in arm, with shawls over their heads in place of hats—laughed openly at John's face.

"Conquers everywhere he goes!" Louise sighed. "We shall never keep him, Sophie!"

"We have him for this evening, at any rate," Sophie replied contentedly; "and he hasn't spent all his fortune yet. I am not at all sure that I shall not hint at supper when we come out of the Palace."

"A pity he fell into bad hands so quickly," Louise laughed. "Here we are! Stalls please, Mr. Millionaire. I wouldn't be seen tonight in the seats of the mighty."

John risked a reproach, however, and was fortunate enough to find a disengaged box. They devoted their attention to the show, Louise and Sophie at first with only a moderate amount of interest, John with the real enthusiasm of one to whom everything is new. His laughter was so hearty, his appreciation so sincere, that his companions found it infectious, and began to applaud everything.

"The binnacle," Louise at last decided firmly. "I refuse to have anything to do with it. You have had all the entertainment you are going to have this evening, Mr. Countryman."

"Now for supper, then," he proposed. "Luigi's," Sophie declared firmly. "The only place in London."

"They drove toward the Strand, John looked around him with interest as they entered the restaurant. Luigi, who came forward to welcome Sophie, escorted them to one of the best tables. "You must be very nice to this gentleman, Luigi," she said. "He is a very great friend of mine. Just arrived in London. He has come up on purpose to see me, and we shall probably decide to make this our favorite restaurant."

"I shall be very happy," Luigi declared, with a bow.

"I am beginning to regret, Mr. Strangewey, that I ever introduced you to Sophie," Louise remarked, as she sank back into her chair. "You won't believe that all my friends are as frivolous as this, will you?"

"They aren't," Sophie proclaimed confidently. "I am the one person who succeeds in keeping Louise with her feet upon the earth. She has never had supper here before. Dry biscuits, hot milk, and a volume of poems are her relaxation after the theater. She takes herself too seriously."

"I wonder if I do," Louise murmured, as she helped herself to caviar. She was suddenly pensive. Her eyes seemed to be looking out of the restaurant, Sophie was exchanging amenities with a little party of friends at the next table.

"One must sometimes be serious," John remarked, "or life would have no point at all."

"I have a friend who scolds me," she confessed. "Sometimes he almost loses patience with me. He declares that my attitude toward life is too analytical. When happiness comes my way, I shrink back. I keep my emotions in the background, while my brain works, dissecting, wondering, speculating. Perhaps what he says is true. I believe that if one gets into the habit of analyzing too much, one loses all elasticity of emotion, the capacity to recognize and embrace the great things when they come."

"I think you have been right," John declared earnestly. "If the great things come as they should come, they are overwhelming, they will carry you off your feet. You will forget to speculate and to analyze. Therefore, I think you have been wise and right to wait. You have run no risk of having to put up with the lesser things."

She leaned toward him across the rose-shaded table. For those few seconds they seemed to have been brought into a wonderfully intimate communion of thought. A wave of her half boldly touched his forehead. His hand boldly rested upon her fingers.

"You talk," she whispered, "as if we were back upon your hilltop once more!"

He turned his head toward the little orchestra, which was playing a low and tremulous waltz tune.

"I want to believe," he said, "that you can listen to the music here and yet live upon the hilltops."

"You believe that it is possible?" "I do indeed," he assured her. "Although my heart was almost sick with loneliness, I do not think that I should be here if I did not believe it. I have not come for anything else, for any lesser things, but to find—"

For once his courage failed him. For one, too, he failed to understand her expression. She had drawn back a little, her lips were quivering. Sophie broke suddenly in upon that moment of suspended speech.

"I know how it would be!" she exclaimed. "I leave you both alone for less than a minute, and there you sit, as grave as two owls. I ask you, now, is this the place to wander off into the clouds? When two people sit looking at each other as you were doing a minute ago, here in Luigi's, and a supper, ordered regardless of expense, on the table before them, they are either without the least sense of the fitness of things, or else—"

"You Talk," She Whispered, "as if We Were Back Upon Your Hilltops Once More!"

"Or else what?" Louise asked.

"Or else they are head over heels in love with each other," Sophie concluded.

"Perhaps the child is right," Louise assented tolerantly, taking a pencil from the basket by her side. "Evidently it is our duty to abandon ourselves to the frivolity of the moment. What shall we do to bring ourselves into record with it? Everybody seems to be behaving most disgracefully. Do you think it would contribute to the gaiety of the evening if I were to join in the chorus of 'You Made Me Love You, Mr. Strangewey' were to imitate the young gentleman at the next table and throw a roll, say, at the portly old gentleman with the highly polished shirt-front?"

"You ought to be thankful all your life that you have met me and that I am disposed to take an interest in you," Sophie remarked, as she moved her chair a little nearer to John's. "I am quite sure that in a very short time you would have become—well, almost a prig. Providence has selected me to work out your salvation."

"Providence has been very kind, then," John told her.

"I hope you mean it," she returned. "You ought to, if you only understood the importance of light-heartedness."

The lights were lowered a few minutes later, and John paid the bill.

"We've enjoyed our supper," Louise whispered, as they passed down the room. "The whole evening has been delightful!"

As they drove from Luigi's to Knightsbridge, Louise leaned back in her corner. Although her eyes were only half closed, there was an air of aloofness about her, an obvious lack of desire for conversation, which the others found themselves instinctively respecting. Even Sophie's light-hearted chatter seemed to have deserted her, somewhat to John's relief.

They were in the very vortex of London's midnight traffic. The night was warm for the time of year, and about Leicester square and beyond the pavements were crowded with pedestrians, the women lightly and gayly clad, fitting, notwithstanding some sinister note about their movements, like butterflies or bright-hued moths along the pavements and across the streets. The procession of taxicabs and automobiles, each with its human freight of men and women in evening dress on their way home after an evening's pleasure, seemed endless.

Presently Sophie began to talk, and Louise, too roused herself.

"I am only just beginning to realize," the latter said, "that you are actually in London."

"When I leave you," he replied, "I, too, shall find it hard to believe that we have actually met again and talked. There seems to be so much that I have to say," he added, looking at her closely, "and I have said nothing."

"There is plenty of time," she told him, and once more the signs of that slight nervousness were apparent in her manner. "There are weeks and months ahead of us."

Home-Reading Course For Citizen-Soldiers

(Issued by the War Department and all rights to reprint reserved.)

This course of thirty daily lessons is offered to the men selected for service in the National Army as a practical help in getting started in the right way. It is informal in tone and does not attempt to give binding rules and directions. These are contained in the various manuals and regulations of the United States Army, to which this course is merely introductory.

LESSON NO. 23.

GETTING AHEAD IN THE ARMY.

Preceding lessons: 1. Your Post of Honor. 2. Making Good as a Soldier. 3. Nine Soldierly Qualities. 4. Getting Ready for Camp. 5. First days in Camp. 6. Cleanliness. 7. Your Health. 8. Marching. 9. Camp and Care of Feet. 10. Your Equipment and Arms. 11. Recreation in Camp. 12. Playing the Game. 13. Grouping Men into Teams. 14. The Team Leaders. 15. Fighting Arms of the Service. 16. Staff Branches of the Service. 17. Staff Branches of the Service. 18. Army System of Training. 19. Close-Order Drill. 20. Extended Order Drill. 21. Guard Duty.

Since regimental and company officers have full responsibility for the efficiency of their teams, they are given corresponding authority in promoting men from the ranks to positions as noncommissioned officers. For all practical purposes their judgment as to the men under them is regarded as final.

One point as to which you may feel assured is the earnest desire of every officer to give promotion to the men who are best qualified—in other words, to select the men who have cultivated the soldierly qualities and in addition show capacity for further development and for leadership. The officers are fully as much interested in promoting men on the basis of merit as any of the men are interested in securing promotion. For the officers' own burdens are lightened and their success is increased almost in direct proportion to their ability to promote the right men.

Chances for Promotion. The first rank above private is corporal. The corporal should be a real leader. He is expected to be familiar with the various manuals and regulations and with the duties of the men in the squad than are the men themselves. He is expected also to use his influence strongly toward building up soldierly qualities among these men.

Among the qualifications which all noncommissioned officers should possess the following have been selected by one military officer as being of the first importance:

Robbing Peter to pay Paul soon peters out.

1. Proficiency as guides in close-order drills, and particularly as column leaders in route marching. 2. Aggressive leadership, especially in drilling, marching, and fighting. 3. Ability to act as instructors. 4. Thorough knowledge of the elements of field service. 5. Thorough knowledge of interior guard duty. 6. Skill in range finding and in estimating distances so as to assist men in firing accurately. 7. Proficiency in leading patrols. 8. Ability to prepare written messages that are clear, complete and concise. 9. Ability to sketch and read maps.

This list will suggest some of the lines along which you should work, whenever you have the chance. Many of the noncommissioned officers in the national army will be chosen, not only because of the knowledge or skill they already possess, but also because they show capacity for further development and for leadership.

Developing Soldierly Qualities. This question of winning promotion all comes back to the question of making yourself a thorough soldier, of demonstrating that you possess loyalty, disciplined obedience, physical fitness, intelligence, cleanliness, cheerfulness, spirit, tenacity, and self-reliance—the nine qualities of a soldier.

The national army must fit itself for effective service at the front in the shortest possible time. To accomplish this result it must produce out of its own ranks men who are fitted for promotion first to places as noncommissioned officers, either in the first contingent or more probably in later contingents.

This need is your opportunity. It is an opportunity not merely for personal advancement—which in time of war is a small thing to work for—but more than that, an opportunity to render to your country the most effective service of which you are capable. Strive to fit yourself for the duties and responsibilities of leadership. Make yourself count to the utmost in the victorious defense of our American rights and principles, which the national army will devote itself.

It is a soft pillow that is stuffed with good deeds.

Dinner Stories

"Well!" "I have here," began the traveler, "a patent electric hair brush—" "Can't you see I'm as bald as an egg?" snapped the man at the door. "Your wife, perhaps, might—" "My wife wears a wig. She is as bald as I am." "Possibly you have a child who—" "I have. Two months old and still bald." "Ah—but maybe you have a dog. I can recommend this brush equally for man and beast." "Look here, my good man, ours is a Mexican hairless dog. Good day." The traveler gently replaced the brush in his bag and fumbled in another corner of it. "Permit me," he murmured, in honeyed accents, "to show you the best thing in my kit bag."

"I've come to kill a printer," said the little man in particular, asked the foreman.

"Oh, any one will do. I would prefer a small one, but I've got to make some sort of a show—at a fight or leave home, since the paper called my wife's tea party a 'swill affair.'"

When General Leonard Wood was a small boy he was called up in the Stammer class. The teacher said: "Leonard, give me a sentence, and we'll see if we can change it to the imperative mood."

"The horse draws the cart," said Leonard.

"Very good. Now change the sentence to an imperative."

"Get up!" said young Wood.
